WHITNEYS TONIGHT CURTAIN AT 8:30

First Entertainment of Redpath Lyceum Course Certain to Bring Big Crowd to Elks' Theater.

The famous Whitney brothers, renowned all over the country as one of the best lyceum attractions before the people, will tonight open the Redpath lyceum course in Albuquerque. The curtain will rise promptly at 8:30, and the advance sale indicates that one of the largest audiences ever gathered in the Elks' theater will be present.

Wherever good music and jolly, wholesome entertainment is appreciated the Whitney brothers are known and are deservedly popular. They are "repeaters," and wherever they have appeared there has been a demand for an early return engagement. It is doubtful if any similar organization in the United States has such a power to hold and fascinate the popular taste.

Interest in the course of lyceum attractions offered to the Albuquerque public this winter has been confined to no particular class of people, but has been general. The sale of season tickets has exceeded the expectations of the gentlemen promoting the enterprise, and it is an assured fact that when the people have had an opportunity to see the class of entertainment presented at tonight's performance there will be a rush to secure season tickets for the remainder of the course.

Remember, curtain at 8:30.

NEW VAUDEVILLE AT THE PASTIME TONIGHT

Kraft and Myrtle Singing, Dancing and Talking Comedians; Two Newsies Are Clever.

New vaudeville at the Pastime tonight—the real thing in vaudeville. Kraft and Myrtle have some excellent stunts in singing, dancing, talking comedy. They are the funniest ever and will prove real entertainers. The Two Newsies are clever. They have something new and fresh and it ought to take with an Albuquerque audience. The best show in town.

HE TRIED TO SAVE MAINE TOO LATE

Officers of Infated Ship Would Not Believe the Warning Given Them by American the Night Before.

Bedford, Ia., Dec. 15.—About midnight, a little more than twenty-four hours before the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor, February 15, 1898, A. G. Brice of this city, then consul at Matanzas, was warned the vessel was to be destroyed, he says. United States officers in Havana would not credit his story, he asserts.

Upon returning to the United States Mr. Brice told the story to President McKinley and upon his request the information has been withheld until now. Since the report of the naval board has been given out the former consul feels at liberty to make his statement.

"Two nights before the blowing up of the Maine," Mr. Brice said, "I had been down to the city until late and had just arrived at my residence. It was about midnight when I was called to the door. I wondered who could be coming at that hour and looked out a window.

"Is there anyone here?" he asked when I opened the door. I told him I was alone. When he had been seated he inquired again as to the presence of anyone in the house. I again assured him. He said he had a matter of great importance to tell, but only on promise that I should never mention his name in connection with it. He said if his mission ever became known it meant death to him. He was not an American.

"He then told me that the Maine was to be blown up in Havana harbor. There was no time for delay, he said. I prepared dispatches to Fitzhugh Lee, consul general at Havana, which my secretary carried. When he returned he reported that no credence was given to the warning.

"It was difficult to believe, but something, perhaps the way it was told, made me feel that it was true. I rushed to Havana, but couldn't convince them. Next morning when I met Captain Sigbee the first thing he said was, 'If we had only paid attention to your message!'

"When I came to the United States my first official call was upon President McKinley, and to him and the secretary of state I told the incident. I shall never forget the appearance of grief upon McKinley's face. He asked me to not make public my information at that time, and knowing the state of public mind and effort McKinley was able to avoid war if possible. I obeyed his request. Since the report of the naval board I feel at liberty to make public my statement."

SCHEDULE IS OUT NEXT WEEK

Santa Fe Demonstration Train Routed to Be Arranged Within Few Days Says J. D. Tinsley.

According to a statement made this morning by J. D. Tinsley, agricultural expert for the Santa Fe, the projected demonstration train will be routed before the end of next week, and full details of its trip will then be available.

Mr. Tinsley has been in the city several days, arranging by correspondence and otherwise the details of this enterprise.

He stated today that it was the plan to carry two cars of stock on the train, showing both dairy and beef types, of standard grade, for comparison with the types seen along the road. There will also be a good hard hog type and a good bacon hog type, and then several cars of general exhibits from all over the territory.

It is planned to carry eight or ten lecturers on the trip, who will give talks at the different stops, the men best suited to talk about the resources of the country at that particular point being selected to make the addresses.

"We want to teach the dry farmers, especially, two things," said Mr. Tinsley this morning. "One is that it costs no more to keep a good cow than a poor one, and the other is that it pays to keep a cow on a dry farm. We shall take special pains in interesting the farmers in dairying and in raising hogs, for these are two things that should appeal to the dry farmer."

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, weighs nearly 300 pounds and will never enter the ring again in a contest to retain his title, according to information received at his home. Johnson is on the ocean on his way back to Chicago with his wife, who is seriously ill. He sailed with his wife from Liverpool yesterday and before starting let it be known to his friends in Chicago that he had finished with the roped arena.

Johnson's friends in the "colored belt" in Chicago had discussed rumors of the champion's retirement for several days past, but when the confirmation of these came they were at a loss to understand his action. Johnson has given it out that he will engage in business when he reaches his home.

FUEL OIL IS THE SAME ALWAYS

Which Is a Good Reason for Its Use; Lack of Ash and Compactness of Storage Space Other Advantages.

San Bernardino, Cal., Dec. 15.—Recent publications in the interest of the oil trade show that oil has many advantages over coal as a fuel.

"Chemistry has shown," says one of these, "that coals from the same district may vary as greatly as cuts of meat from the same beef. That coal varies greatly in its proportion of ash, sulphur and heat units (the elements that affect the value of steam coal) is shown by the exhaustive tests that many large users now require before purchase.

"A neglect of this precaution often results disastrously. For instance, according to business, a manufacturer who had taken advantage of an opportunity to save a few dollars on the first cost of his coal by buying some that he had been assured came from the same district as the good coal he had formerly used, soon found himself in considerable trouble.

"The increase in consumption to keep up the required amount of steam was so great that the added labor brought forth immediate complaints from the engine room. Firing had to be almost incessant, and grates became clogged so rapidly that stoking was also close to a continuous operation, and all the while the ash pile was growing into a mountain.

"A chemist was called in finally to look into the condition. He did so, and his test proved that the coal contained a fraction less than two-thirds ash. Such lessons cost money, but they have to be learned in some way, and the great ash heap, two-thirds the size of the original coal pile, made a striking object lesson.

"The storage of coal is also a considerable item. Frequent handling will greatly increase its cost. In one plant where an expert was called in to advise on this subject, he discovered that the company was spending $1 cent a ton on the transportation of coal from the time it reached the siding until it went into the furnaces.

"In a German factory firemen trained to appreciate the scientific principles involved in the work produced a saving over the work of the regular but untrained stokers of $2.50 a day, or $50 a week of 144 hours. The untrained men had produced a thermal efficiency of 48.6 per cent, while the trained stokers on the same job brought it up to 72.7 per cent, an actual saving, if expressed in dollars and cents of $8.50 a day. In another German plant where a similar test was made a saving three times the amount of that just quoted was produced."

GERMANS RAISE WAR FUND HERE

New York Bankers Supplied Seventy-Five Million Dollars Last Winter on Short Time Loans to Foreigners.

London, Dec. 15.—The correspondent of the London Daily Mail, telegraphing his paper from Berlin, says that the total of the sums borrowed by the German government in New York last summer and fall, at a conservative estimate, will reach $75,000,000.

This resort to American financial aid, which the correspondent describes as unprecedented, was due, he says, to military and naval preparations which might have been precipitated by the German government's policy in Morocco.

The money was advanced in part to the Prussian government, and in part to the German National bank. The direct transactions with the Prussian government involved $20,000,000. There were issued Prussian treasury notes to that amount, redeemable in Berlin. It was then decided that it would be undesirable for the treasury to deplete itself, as would have been necessary in the redemption of the notes, so it was arranged to borrow in New York and deposit new treasury notes there as security.

It is asserted that the requirements of the German Empire were so imperative that 5 per cent was paid for the loan without hesitation.

These loans to the German government were the culmination of numerous similar operations with banks in New York, among which figured one of the most prominent financial houses.

THE COUNTRY'S BEST PLAY.

"The Chameleon," whose engagement is announced at the Elks' theater on Saturday night, December 16, is described as the greatest and most daringly original drama ever put forth by an American writer. It is unconvictional both in character and treatment, and it grips an audience with tremendous power. For the first time the real negro is satisfactorily portrayed. Not merely one type is shown, but several, including the educated mulatto, the faithful ante-bellum servant, the selfish but likable old darkey who has to be scared into good behavior by the Ku Klux, and finally the low vicious wretch. There is at least equal skill exhibited in the depiction of the whites. The characters of Ben Cameron and his father, representatives of the old southern chivalry; Austin Stoneman, the implacable and embittered south-hater; General Nathan Bedford Forrest, the dashing cavalry leader and founder of the Ku Klux Klan; and Nellie Graham, a tender bud of the south who hesitates not to join the fearful Klan to save the man she loves, form a striking portrayal of the leading figures of reconstruction days.

STUDENTS WILL GOVERN THEMSELVES

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 15.—State university students adopted today a system of self-government by which all moral affairs of the students are left in the hands of an executive committee of ten members of each class, including four girls.

If a student is detected in dishonorable violation of university rules he will be tried secretly by the committee. The finding, if unfavorable, will be kept secret, but the offender will be notified to leave the university within a week. If the student refuses, public expulsion is the penalty. An appeal can be made to a higher body of students.
